A Truly Special Convocation

On 30 June The University of Alberta proudly conferred an honorary Doctor of Laws degree on His Royal Highness Prince Charles. The Prince of Wales, who is also Chancellor of the University of Wales, one of our University's sister Commonwealth universities, delivered the following address.

On this occasion you have been generous enough to confer on me the same honorary law degree as that given by your predecessors to my great uncle, the then Prince of Wales, over sixty years ago. I have not been able to find out what he said in 1919, but I fell to reflecting on the importance of law in our society and the way in which the legal framework, built upon and improved throughout the centuries in Britain, and adopted by other countries such as Canada, has preserved our freedom as individuals. The administration of a system of law by an independent judiciary which is seen to establish the equality of all before that law, is the means by which our democratic way of life can exist and be preserved. We may take large parts of it for granted; we may criticise it, resent it, ridicule it; pressure groups of one kind or another may seek to alter it; it may produce obvious disadvantages which aggravate people, but ultimately a system of law which is seen to be the most reasonable under difficult circumstances is what protects us from the dangers of authoritarianism whether from the left or the right. In terms of English law, the first battle against authoritarianism was won when King John signed the Magna Carta. From then on the English legal system developed chiefly as the result of clashes with the crown, the supreme fount of power, until the last vestiges of an authoritarian approach to the conduct of men's lives was removed and the crown developed to the point where it can, I think, be said to provide an important link in the chain of defence against a loss of those liberties we hold so dear. And yet, do we hold them dear enough? Is it fact possible to understand their importance to the life of each individual without first experiencing a loss of liberty, in the sense that it is chiefly one's own experiences that open one's eyes to the realities of the world? In Canada and Britain we have been more than fortunate in avoiding the horrors of occupation and the consequent denial of those basic freedoms we consider to be our natural right. Thousands sacrificed their lives forty years ago in a desperate defence of that right. If they hadn't done so, and if an excuse had been found to opt out of that defence or to compromise in some way over the issue, there is no saying how great a shadow would have fallen across the world.

Prince Charles and Princess Diana make the acquaintance of members of the platform party. A short while later, President Horowitz spoke for everyone when he said, "Never before has a Convocation at this University aroused more interest and never before have we approached Convocation with greater excitement and joy—a fitting culmination to a rather full and exciting year."

This Week's Quote

"On a pay-as-you-play basis, the cost of a court is $8 per hour (plus another $4 if you bring a guest.)"

Source: Folio, 7 July 1983, page 5. The story on pricing policy for our new tennis centre brings a new meaning to the term "singles." □

The fact remains, of course, that millions of people do still exist under a shadow of gigantic proportions—the shadow of authoritarianism from either end of the political spectrum. Do we actually have any idea of what that means? We can, I suggest, discover something of what it means by listening to those who have suffered, or who are suffering, in a way that is hard for us to imagine. They tell us that they live within a system which derives its inspiration from the basic motivation of a thirst for power, and power alone. In such a system power is an end in itself—the better to achieve its consolidation and the destruction of all potential enemies. Those who have observed the operation of the system in practice, rather than in theory, will insist that the struggle waged against religion for instance is not for ideological reasons, but for power. This is because a religious man, deep down in his soul tends to remain free of political parties or any other earthly power. The struggle waged against such individuals is because they have dared to expose themselves without being asked. Living in the countries that we do and brought up the way we are, without a constant sense of fear or suspicion, without a feeling that those whom we love could be intimidated as a result of our actions tends to make us think that such reports must be somewhat exaggerated and that one set of human beings could not possibly do what they do to their fellow men. There is no doubt that countless people whose freedoms are crushed under the weight of a seemingly limitless oppression look towards countries like ours to provide some kind of flickering light of freedom amongst the total darkness that surrounds them. The least we can do, I believe, is to attempt to understand the predicament of those who are made to suffer for what they believe in, by imagining what our feelings would be if we were in a similar situation. What better way to describe this than by quoting the Pope who said recently, "I ask those who are suffering to be particularly close to me. I ask this in the name of Christ, who said, 'I was sick and you visited me. I was in prison and you came to me.'"

Of course, it is only too easy for people to turn round and say you are being naive and unrealistic. The Christian approach is all very well, but what can we as individuals possibly do, bearing in mind that our freedom of action is so circumscribed. Well, for a start, I believe in the overwhelming strength of the human spirit and in the power of faith. Deep in the human soul, as Mihajlo Mihajlof describes it, lies an unfamiliar force which is stronger than all the external forces which surround us. That force is unfamiliar because we have forgotten what it sounds like and what it needs to release it. It is hardly surprising, I suppose, when you think how much else there is in the external world to take its place. But nevertheless it is that force which think Solzhenitsyn is referring to when he talks about "a decline in courage being the most striking feature which an outside observer notices in the west today." Life is full of mysterious paradoxes, but one of the most extraordinary is that attested to by some of those who have undergone the most extreme spiritual and physical suffering during their imprisonment, but who have also experienced a fulfilment of the soul undreamed of by people who have not experienced captivity. From this paradox we learn that it is through such individual awareness of the inner voice, and through the faith which this engenders that the essence of totalitarian rule can in fact be undermined—in the sense that totalitarianism relies on a belief in the unlimited power of external circumstances, which supposedly direct man's inner world. If there is the very real possibility that the physical world is subject to the spiritual forces of the human soul then there is indeed hope for those who lack the individual freedoms we experience under the law.

And precisely because we enjoy those freedoms we have obligations too. We have two particular obligations. I believe one is to try to appreciate that there is inevitably a price to pay for the blessings of democracy—be it organized crime or pornography or whatever. But it is only a price, and the basis of civilized living, it seems to me, is to realize that you can never have something for nothing. One writer living in a state of "unfreedom" emphasized very well what I am trying to get at when he wrote that "the efforts to diminish the expenses of democracy in the process not to be transformed into unfreedom is the eternal care of a democratic society."

The second obligation is the one we owe to those countless individuals—yes, individuals, (they could be you or me, not a mass divided up into categories to be manipulated like automata) who, perhaps secretly, deep down in their beings, have high expectations of people like ourselves. We have an increasing obligation to concentrate on developing our moral courage and a corresponding awareness of that inner force that we all possess, but without which we will be unable to resist that shadow of authoritarianism and at the same time provide a beam of Hope, like a lighthouse on a stormy cliff top, for those who suffer in silence. □

Board of Governors

The Board of Governors met on 8 July. The following matters were among the items dealt with in the open portion of the meeting.

Financial Business

Approval was given for a grant of $85,000 to the Students' Union, on a global basis, for 1983-84. Each year, the Students' Union requests a single grant from the Board to keep a number of its services and organizations on an even keel. Certain monies will be allocated by the Students' Union Executive to the Students' Union Housing Registry, the Students' Union Examination Registry, Students' Orientation Services, Student Help, the Gateway, CJSR Campus Radio, SUB Theatre, and others.

The 1982-83 grant to the Students' Union was $75,000.

Students, the Board decided, will have to pay a flat fee of $2 per transcript, effective 1 July 1983. Under the old policy, unchanged since 1971, the first ten transcripts were provided free of charge upon request; students were then charged for additional copies.

The Board Finance Committee said that a number of related changes had been made in recent years and that the new transcript fee policy is similar to those in place at most other Canadian universities.

Building News

The Board Building Committee was successful in its recommendation for a Capital Expenditure Authorization Request for an amount not to exceed $490,000 for major renovations in the Faculty of Physical Education and Recreation.

The Department of Athletic Services will move into the Universiade Pavilion and the current Athletic Services offices and adjacent classroom space in Physical Education West will be renovated for new Faculty offices, including that of the Dean. The Department of Physical Education will also set up shop in the Pavilion (fourth floor) and the Department of Recreation and Leisure Services will move into the vacated area on the fourth floor of Physical Education East. Campus Recreation offices will be located where Recreation Administration is now. Additionally, Physical Education and Recreation staff with offices in the Students' Union Building and the Education Gymnasium Complex will join their confreres in the new setup. This may seem like a vigorous game of musical chairs but the idea is to consolidate the Faculty in such a way that limited space is put to maximum use.

"We can't afford to have an area sit idle just because it's booked for a high risk sport like gymnastics," said Dean Glassford in pointing out that more space is needed for the exceedingly popular employee fitness program. Both men's and women's gymnastics will be

The Building Committee also received approval for the release of an amount not to exceed $443,000 for the construction of a Meeting and Development Centre on top of the new Faculty of Business Building. The Centre is designed to meet a perceived need for interaction with the professional business community, specialized management development activities, increased interaction between graduates and employers, and general University functions.

Discussion of the project brought out the comment that the proposed overhead link between the Business and Arts Buildings has been scrapped and that a ground level link will be considered.

The Building Committee reported for information that it had approved guidelines regulating the installation and use of video display terminals on campus. The guidelines specify that prior to acceptance or purchase, VDT equipment must comply with all federal or provincial acts or regulations, and with Canadian Standards Association or Underwriters Laboratories requirements. Also, the concerns of the operator must be examined.

The Department of Occupational Health and Safety will provide training for supervisors and operators to ensure an awareness of the appropriate procedures when operating terminals for long periods of time.

Tests conducted by Canada Health and Welfare Radiation Protection Branch and other bodies show that little or no radiation from VDT's occurs. The tests show that radiation levels, if any, are well below recommended safety standards.

VDT's will be checked upon request to ensure that radiation levels, if any, meet recommended safety standards.

The guidelines are subject to review to ensure the health and safety of VDT Operators.

Senate Focusses on Mature Students

For a few hours on Thursday, 30 June, University Senators and their guests turned away from the excitement of Charles, Diana, and University '83 and focussed on the question of mature students.

After welcoming Senators to the campus on the last day of the 75th Anniversary celebrations (celebrations that concluded with the Special Convocation in honor of His Royal Highness Prince Charles), Chancellor Savaryn introduced the following new members of Senate: Robert Heyworth, Vice-President of the Alumni Association; General Faculties Council representatives Brian Harris, J.A. Kernahan, and (the reappointed) Dick Faryon; and Mungo Hardwicke-Brown, Sterling Sunley, Brian Thomas, and Andrew Watts, appointed by the Students' Union. The Chancellor noted three new appointments by the Minister of Advanced Education—Bonnie Kerr, Jack Scott, and Larry Soper—and one reappointment—Jack McLean—and he paid tribute to retiring Senators Joyce Currie and Joanne Brennand, both NASA representatives on Senate.

(Bonnie Kerr, a former teacher, is a representative of the stockbrokerage firm Richardson Greenshields of Canada Ltd. Jack Scott graduated from this University's Faculty of Dentistry in 1974. He has been actively involved in the Alumni Association. Larry Soper is a junior high school teacher in Edmonton. He is also an alumnus of the University, having received a BEd in 1977.)

The Chancellor then asked Marguerite Trussler, Chairman of the Task Force on Mature Students, to introduce the report.

The Task Force on Mature Students began its work in the spring of 1982. The nine-member group—six representatives of Senate, two members of this University's faculty and one representative from Athabasca University—examined the issues and concerns of mature students and the implications for the University of having increasing numbers of non-traditional students.

The recommendations were wide-ranging and included suggestions regarding support services, available courses, residency requirements, registration procedures, finances, skill improvement, upgrading and remediation, alternate routes of entry, orientation and information services, and counselling services.

According to the chairman, the two most significant recommendations were those dealing with alternate routes of entry and the establishment of a resource unit which would provide orientation, information, and counselling services to mature students. On the subject of alternate routes of entry, the Task Force recommended that the "non-matriculated adult" category of admission be abolished; that the term "mature student" be used uniformly throughout the University to apply to students who are twenty-three years of age and over; and that a non-program route of admission be established for mature students. This would accommodate those students who meet University admission requirements but who wish to take courses primarily for interest; students who meet University admission requirements but lack specific requirements for a quota faculty; and students who do not meet the University's admission requirements (currently classified as nma's). In addition, the recommendation suggested that the non-program route offer great flexibility, and that pre-admission and on-going counselling by an experienced advisor be mandatory.

In recommending the establishment of a single resource unit for mature students, the Task Force outlined several services that could be incorporated within the new unit: an information centre to field inquiries specifically related to University entrance for the mature student; a full-time academic advisor knowledgeable about all programs; a counsellor experienced in working with mature students; a lounge area and study room; and a variety of seminars and programs of special interest to mature students (these, possibly, to be organized by a mature students' association).

In a strong endorsement for the spirit of the report, President Horowitz emphasized the importance of making the University an institution that can serve all ages. While acknowledging the growing possibility of limiting enrolments, he urged nonetheless that more mature students be welcomed to campus.

Patti Browne, Professor of Education and a member of the Task Force, pointed out that all universities around the world are examining the same issues raised by the Task Force report. She cautioned Senators to remember that a great many of those who come back to university as mature students do so with a great deal of prior education. "It is important to realize that the people we are dealing with are not those who didn't make it the first time round," she remarked.

After considerable discussion, it was agreed that the Report of the Task Force on Mature Students be received by Senate and forwarded to the appropriate constituencies for consideration. In addition, it was agreed that a progress report with regards to actions resulting from the recommendations be presented to Senate within two years.

Copies of the Report of the Task Force on Mature Students are available from the Senate Office, 150 Athabasca Hall, telephone 432-2268.

Before Senators disbursed, many to attend the Special Convocation, a film of the Special Convocation held last 24 June in St. Paul, Alberta, was shown. The film highlighted the conferring of an honorary doctorate on Mother Teresa of Calcutta. □

Doctoral Program a First in the Prairies

The first doctoral program in business management to be offered by a prairie university will begin this fall in the Faculty of Business.

Alberta Advanced Education recently announced the approval of funding for the new program, the only one of its kind in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

The new program is the result of a growing need for qualified instructors to teach undergraduate and graduate programs in Canadian business schools. The doctorate in business management will enable the Business Faculty to more effectively investigate major business programs, contribute to the development of the province as a business and financial centre, and provide the business community with more highly educated individuals in strategic areas of business.

The program will also help reduce the need for quotas in University business programs as the academic staff component increases. Research associated with the program will contribute to the overcoming of various challenges facing western Canadian business.

Bob Korkie, Associate Professor of Finance and Management Science, will direct the program. □

Reta Rowan, 1895 - 1983

Reta Rowan, wife of the late William Rowan, long-time professor and founder and head of this University's Department of Zoology, died in Toronto recently. She was eighty-eight years old.

Born in England, she studied at the Slade School of Arts in London and was a singer with the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company. She and Dr. Rowan were married in 1919 and emigrated to Canada a short while later. After spending one year at the University of Manitoba, the Rowans settled in Edmonton. Reta Rowan raised her family of two sons and three daughters and participated in numerous University and community activities for more than fifty years. In 1977, she moved to Willowdale, Ontario.

As her papers indicate, Mrs. Rowan's interests were varied, ranging from involvement with cultural groups such as the Folk Festival Committee and the Allied Arts Council, to association with the Alberta Adult Education Society and with the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. It was, however, her work with minority groups at the civic and

J.F. Bergmann, 1928 - 1983

It was with sadness that the Department of Geography learned of the sudden death of John F. Bergmann, known to his friends and colleagues as Jack, on 1 July in Red Deer where he was attending an antique car rally.

Dr. Bergmann, an American citizen born in Los Angeles, had served the department well for twenty-three years. He graduated from UCLA in 1950 with an AB, and from the University of Texas in 1952 with a MA. In 1959, he received his doctorate from UCLA.

Evidence of his fine mind and careful scholarship emerged early with his PhD thesis on "The Cultural Geography of Cacao in Aboriginal Middle America and its Commercialization in Early Guatemala." His publications from this research established him as a well respected Latin American historical cultural geographer who was at home not only among the dusty 16th century manuscripts of the Archivo General de Indias in Seville, Spain, but also atop a mule scrambling up and down mountain ridge paths in Guatemala during field work. During the years of his three study leaves in Latin America and many other visits, Dr. Bergmann expanded his research to encompass Welsh settlement in Argentina; pastoral and irrigated land uses in Patagonia, particularly ethnic influences on how land was cultivated and the problems of erosion; and the southern hemisphere limits of cultivation. With his fluent Spanish he made many friends and acquaintances throughout Central and South America. His small but qualitative output was highly respected and he frequently read papers at major meetings.

Dr. Bergmann's first professional appointment was as an Assistant Professor at Southern Methodist University (1957 to 1960). He joined the staff of The University of Alberta as an Assistant Professor in 1960 and was promoted to Associate Professor in 1964. It soon became apparent that he was an informed teacher, preparing his lectures carefully and being especially effective in his Latin American courses and the training of graduate students. He had the great satisfaction of knowing that George Lovell, his doctoral graduate, is now acclaimed as one of the brightest young scholars in historical geography of Latin America, as Dr. Bergmann himself once was.

Uncomplaining in his service to the department, he undertook a number of administrative responsibilities, a major one being Editor of Departmental Publications. He was a member of the Canadian Association of Geographers, the Association of American Geographers, a Fellow of the American Geographical Society, and an elected director of the Governing Board of the Latin American Specialty Group of the Association of American Geographers. Dr. Bergmann was also a member of the Society of Sigma Xi and a long-time member and Trustee of the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

Condolences are extended to his mother, Mrs. Rosemund Bergmann, and to his brother, Howard, and wife, Jean, of Westminster, California, on the untimely death of Dr. Bergmann.

University to Host Triennial Conference on Education

The Fourth Triennial Conference on Education will take place at The University of Alberta from 26 July to 4 August. The conference, sponsored by the World Council for Curriculum and Instruction (WCCI), Edmonton Branch, has as its theme "Education for a Just Social and Economic Order: Rhetoric or Reality?"

About 250 participants from sixty-five countries will discuss aspects of the theme in papers and workshops. Among the countries represented are Canada, the United States, England, the Netherlands, Finland, Germany, Israel, Ethiopia, Kuwait, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, South Africa, India, Korea, Australia, and Chile.

We have invited people who have demonstrated unusual competence or potential in some aspect of education related to the theme, said Conference Director Elizabeth Filipkowski.

The conference, to be held in 2-115 Education North, will "explore ways and means to ensure that the promotion of equity is a continuing thread in the curriculum of learners at any age." Participants will examine the implications of the theme, consider new curricular and instructional endeavors, share research, and discuss strategies to change theory into practice.

A number of topics, including

"Toward Understanding International/Intercultural Curricula in Schools,"

"Designing Curriculum for Social Justice," "Adult Education for Social and Economic Development," and Research Approaches to Global Education," will be dissected during the course of the conference.

One of the plenary session speakers is Bom Mo Chung, founder and first president of the Korean Institute for Research in the Behavioral Sciences. Dr. Chung will give his views on what role education should play in terms of national development and how education should be valued.

Other speakers include WCCI President Jaime Diaz of Bogota, Colombia, and Kazin Bacchus, University of Alberta Department of Educational Foundations.

English is the official language of the conference.

A display of curriculum materials ("A Walk Through the World"), the traditional WCCI bazaar, and a film festival will run concurrently with the conference. And the participants will take advantage of the Heritage Days weekend to explore the cultural diversity of Edmonton and its environs.

WCCI is a trans-national education organization with members in some seventy countries. It was founded in 1970 and is recognized by UNESCO as an affiliated non-governmental organization. WCCI is in business to improve education and make it more widely available.

Ted Aoki, Chairman of our University's Department of Secondary Education, is a member of the WCCI Executive Committee. Elizabeth Filipkowski, Conference Director, is Professor of Elementary Education and Music here.

Previous world conferences were held in England (1974), Turkey (1977), and the Philippines (1980).□

Hi, Technology!

The Minister's Task Force on Computers in Schools recommends that by 1985 all students in Alberta schools have regular access to a computer learning station.

The report of the task force, released earlier this month by Education Minister David King, suggests that regular access ("direct, organized and reliable computer access") is necessary for students to become computer literate. The report also recommends that there be a minimum of one computer learning station for every eight students in a school.

E.W. Romaniuk, Professor and Associate Chairman of the Department of Educational Psychology at this University, served as chairman of the thirteen-member task force which was established in 1982.

Dr. Romaniuk and his associates propose that by 1986, all students graduating from the Faculties of Education at Alberta universities be required to complete a computer literacy course, and that this be a condition for obtaining a teaching certificate. For teachers already in the system, the task force recommends an extensive program of in-service training to raise the level of computer literacy. Teachers would be supported by computer consultants employed by the various school districts.

According to the report, the provincial government could encourage a courseware industry by means of incentives, funding assistance and shared research, thus making Alberta predominant in the development of the necessary classroom material.

The task force envisions all schools in the province being in possession of some computer hardware well before the close of this decade. "Students will need computer knowledge and skills to understand and manage the changes they will face," the report states. "School graduates must be prepared to participate in a competitive work world pervaded by computers. The recommendations contained in this report, if followed, will encourage and support this enterprise." □

For Safety's Sake

The notice in Folio of 7 July regarding violation of direction signs at the entry to 'N' and 'U' parking zones must have struck many who park there as a piece of bureaucratic petulance based on a foolish system. The design of the entrance in question may have made sense at some period in history; today, it makes no sense at all. At the entrance to 'N' and 'U' zones there is one entry lane, to the left of which is a kiosk containing a parking attendant, and to the left of this are two exit lanes, one of which is often used as a casual parking area by University vehicles. A result of this arrangement is that regular users can arrive in the morning to be confronted by a considerable number of visitors lined up in the entry lane. Waiting for these folk to pay their fees, fumble for change, ask for information, etc., can be very frustrating for regular users, especially if they have already been held up in traffic and have only minutes to spare to reach a lecture theatre. Consequently, it is common to see such people pull out of the line and enter the car park through one of the two exit lanes which of course are little used at this time of day.

An intelligent administration, recognizing that there is such a thing as a rush hour for motorists arriving in the morning and that departures at the end of the day are more staggered, would long ago have taken advantage of the space available at the entrance and moved the attendant's kiosk over by one lane to make two entry lanes: one lane for visitors and one for regular users, thus avoiding unnecessary, tedious waiting for the latter. Is it too much to expect of Parking Services that such a change be made, or is the present arrangement deliberately preserved as a source of revenue generated by exacting fines?
